Re: Creative Arts Alliance Art Recommendation

#2

This past weekend at our Parks, Recreation and Arts Citizens Advisory Committee meeting we discussed sculptures from the 51 pieces that were submitted with the call for art through the Creative Arts Alliance. This year there are seventeen cities participating so the Parks, Recreation and Arts Advisory Committee reviewed and voted on their top seventeen pieces. Attached you will see the pieces in order chosen for the Parks, Recreation and Arts Committee of Council's to approve. In the past we have also recommended a placement for the piece, but this year with all the cities participating the committee felt it was best to secure the piece prior to making a recommendation on where it should be placed. With your approval I would like to move this forward to the Parks, Recreation and Arts Committee of Council for their next meeting. Once we have secured the piece, which will occur on the 24th of February, at the draft we will come back with a location recommendation for the committee's approval and then forward it on to Council for their final approval.

Descriptions: This towering sculpture takes its title from a phenomenon in the science of hydraulics. When a fast moving liquid enters a zone of slow moving liquid, the fast flow is abruptly slowed and increases in height. At high enough speeds the front will break and curl back upon itself. The tension steel experiences when bent back upon itself is similar to this undulation and wave action. A series of waves.

Media: Cast Bronze

Maintenance: Brush and dust, can buff with wax if needed.

Price: $13,000

From: St. Louis, MO

Descriptions: This sculpture is a representation of the aspiration of all those in aviation. The figure is part plane, who looks skyward in search of the sky, but who is also tethered by legs and a wheel, the representation of our engineering limitations and human limitations. A being torn between two worlds.

Descriptions: Peace, love and understanding? Honor, armor, and sharp steel? Is it a graceful dancer on the stage giving the performance of a lifetime or an ancient samurai warrior of Japan marching into battle to defend his lands from invading hordes? One of the many wonders of abstract sculpture is tie into the viewer's perspective. I can see one aspect and others will see something completely different.

Artwork Name: Kiss

Dimensions: 5' x 5' on 36" in high base

Media: Powdercoated Steel

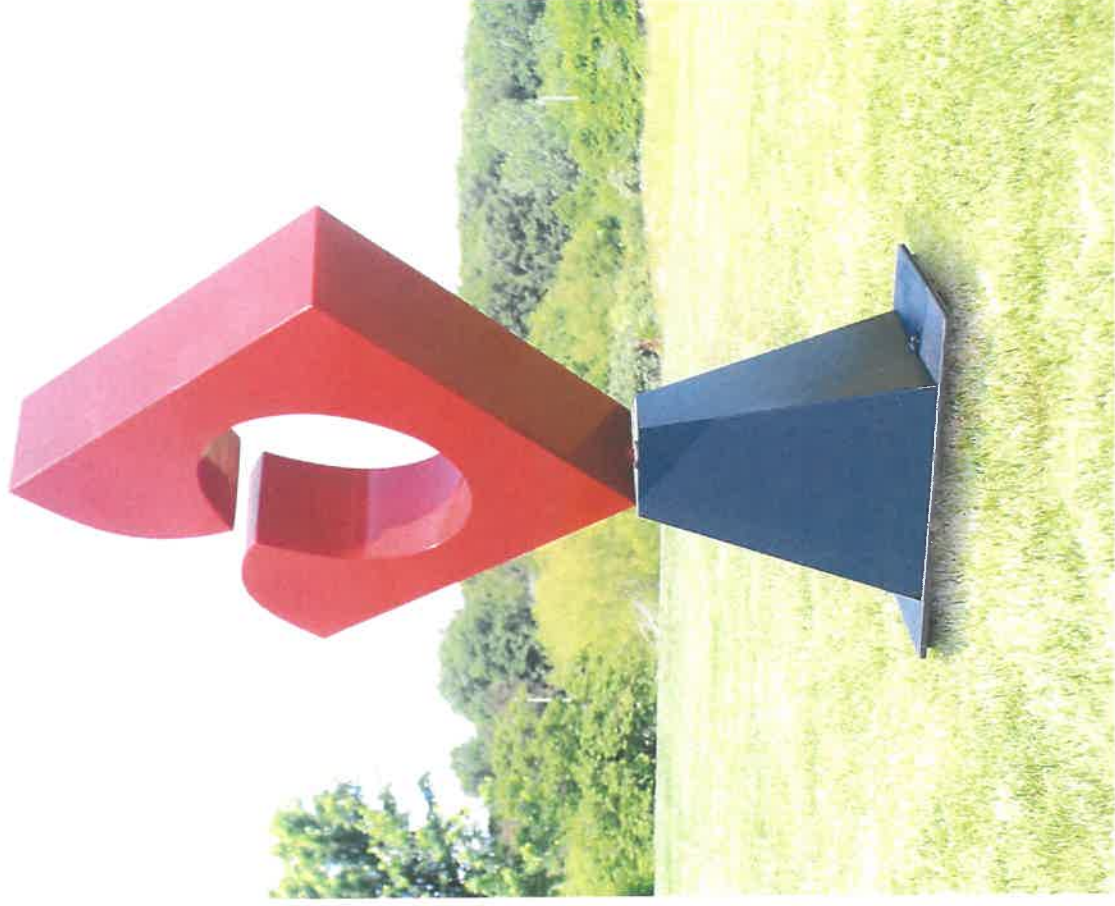

Maintenance:

Year Created: 2018

Price: $6500

From: Harrisburg, MO

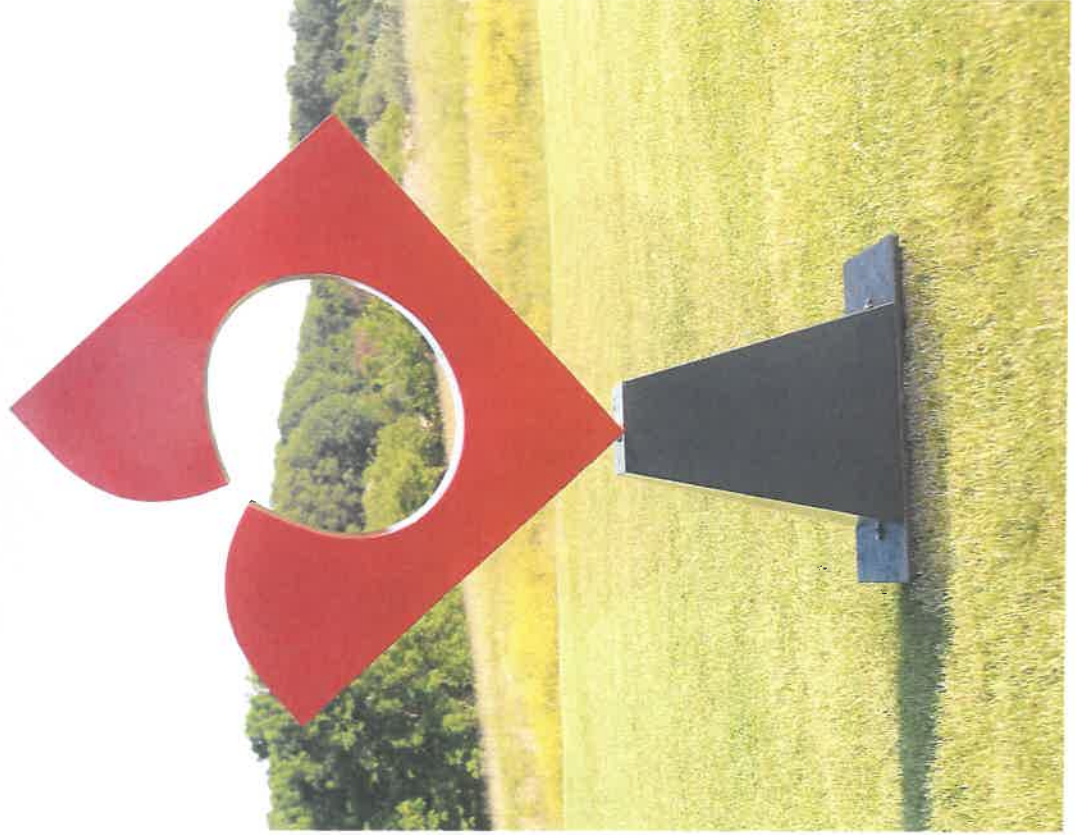

Website: www.charlesstrain.com

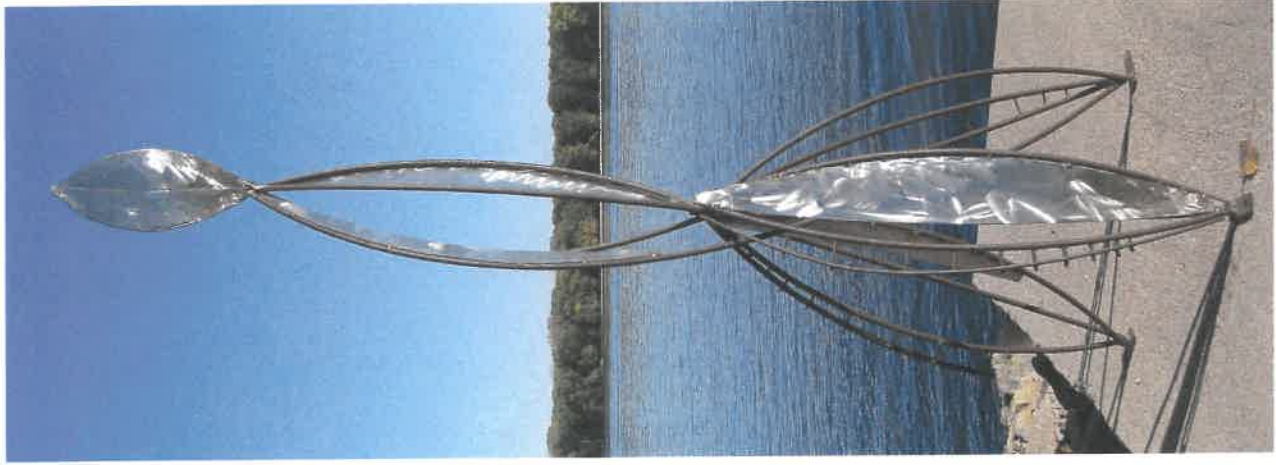

Descriptions: Charles draws his imagery from the world of nature and life experience. The fusion of man and nature is a predominate theme in Strain's sculpture. The aesthetic lines of the human figure and the celebration of human emotion are vehicles he uses as subject matter in his composition. Happiness, sadness, a moment in time, a familiar experience, a celebration, are some of the experiences that can be found when viewing his sculpture

From: Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Descriptions: I am a multidisciplinary artist working with sculpture, design, video, and drawing. My work explores the boundaries of language, design, and media to tell about my identity as a biracial woman. I use the theories and concepts of language to maneuver thoughts about the way I explain my identity to others in a comprehensible manner. Design and media used are determined by the emotion and energy I want the piece to radiate as the viewer experiences my personal hardships of articulating myself to them. I often use line and the organization of text to connect the piece to my personality.

Additional notes: The CCA is concerned about the size and durability of this piece.

Artwork Name: Geodesic Dance

Dimensions: 101.5" x 42" x 25.5"

Media: Rebar, Metal, Nylon twine, pyramid mirror.

Maintenance: Perhaps the pentagon-based pyramid mirror will need occasional cleaning.

Price: $1000

From: Manchester, MO

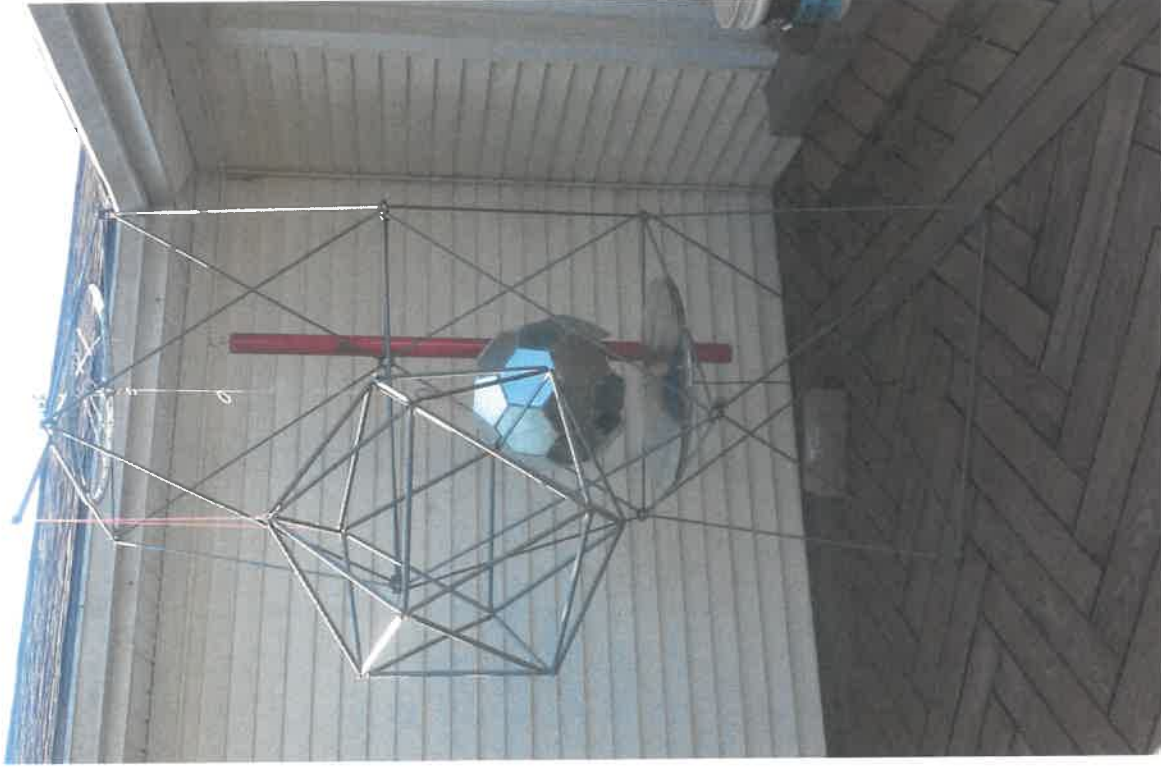

Descriptions: “Geodesic Dance” provides an approving eye into technology but not a wholehearted embrace of it. The suspended icosahedron frame as well as the supporting stacked octahedron frame are geodesic structures in that they use geodesic struts and incorporate tensegrity. There’s movement but it’s relatively slow. In fact, this work is fundamentally about movement—embracing and combining three kinds of anchored movement—rotational, pendulum, and vibrational.

Artist Name: John Bell

Artwork Name: Geodesic Dance

Additional notes: With regards to stability in strong wind, I don't think that we need to be concerned. The piece actually offers little resistance. Using large washers with three large bolts firmly inserted into the concrete platform at each base joint should be sufficient to safeguard the piece against strong winds. The central metallic net that offers the greatest resistance is only loosely connected to the supporting frame. As a strong wind blows against it, the force will be gently absorbed, but will not destabilize the main structure.

Sculpture on the Move Draft Day

Monday, February 24th at 11:30 am
Chesterfield City Hall

690 Chesterfield Pkwy W, Chesterfield, MO 63017

Before then please:

- » Share these works with your selection panel.
- » Select 18 acceptable sculptures. (We have 17 communities participating this year. Your panel needs to select 17 sculpture options ranked #1 - #17 so even if you go last you are guaranteed that you will have an acceptable sculpture. It's extremely unlikely that you will end up far down your list, but we prepare for it just in case.)
- » Bring your list of 17 options to draft day, or if you can't attend, email your numbered selections to kschien@manchestermo.gov and we will ensure your top available choice is selected for you.
- » There will be additional rounds of selection that day if you want a second, or third sculpture.
